Subject: Research Project Proposals for the Annual Action Plan

The Tribal Research and Development Institute, Bhopal, established in 1954, has been entrusted to play a vital role in conservation of tribal heritage, economic development and policy formation through research. The institute has effectively contributed to understanding and reaching out to the tribal people of Madhya Pradesh since its inception. The Tribal Research and Development Institute, Bhopal, has a museum on tribal art and culture, a library on diverse areas of studies and an audio-visual archive built over decades. The institute collaborates with other universities and institutions to achieve its stated objectives.

Research on relevant topics is the most significant activity which the institute undertakes and promotes. Through its Annual Action Plan, the institute submits relevant research projects to the apex body every year.

We invite experts from recognised institutes and universities to submit detailed projects (in annexed format) for action based research projects on tribal people/cultures/societies of Madhya Pradesh which can contribute to tribal welfare.
