Psychometric tool activity : O*NET™ Career Exploration Tools

The O*NET™ Career Exploration Tools are composed of the O*NET WORK IMPORTANCE PROFILER, O*NET COMPUTERIZED INTEREST PROFILER, and O*NET ABILITY PROFILER Find the below objectives of these tests and the results----

PRIMARY GOALS : The CIP was developed to serve a variety of programs within the employment and training community that provide career exploration and counseling services to clients. Specifically, four primary goals were considered in developing the CIP:

- 1) Develop an instrument with strong technical characteristics that would provide clients with accurate and useful information.
- 2) Develop a fair and unbiased instrument that would serve the needs of clients from a variety of ethnic, cultural, and socioeconomic backgrounds. Every effort was made to ensure that the instrument would be helpful to clients with different backgrounds.
- 3) Develop an instrument that included items representing the entire world of work. This would help ensure that the instrument would provide useful information to individuals with different work-related goals and interests.
- 4) Develop an instrument that could be used as a self-assessment tool that individuals could self-administer, self-score, and self-interpret. This self- assessment instrument would help empower clients to take control of their career exploration efforts. Of course, the instrument also could be used by counselors with clients in a one-on one or group setting.

Approx. 325 students from different departments given these tests, got their results and their self assessment too. Detailed list is given in the table below :
